This way to Downtown Chapel Hill

Welcome to Chapel Hill! It's about to get easier to find your way around the southern part of heaven.

Crews have installed two pilot signs as part of a new vehicular way-finding signage project launched by the Town of Chapel Hill. The signs will be located on Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard between Weaver Dairy Road and Westminster Drive and on Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard just before Estes Drive.

Eventually there will be a total of about 40 way-finding signs to guide people into downtown, the University area including the hospital and sporting attractions, and other key attractions such as parks and community centers. The project is just one piece of the Town's efforts to improve signage for residents and visitors, as directed by the Town Council.

The scope of this project is limited to signs that will direct automobile traffic to the general destinations in Chapel Hill. Future projects will address pedestrian-scale signs and parking signs, especially in downtown.

Homegrown Halloween

Homegrown Halloween will return to Chapel Hill on Oct. 31, 2010. The shared effort among the Town, University and Downtown businesses aims to return Halloween on Franklin Street to its roots as a small town community gathering and to reduce crowd sizes.

Traffic access to downtown Chapel Hill will be restricted starting at 7 p.m. There will be no bus shuttles although Safe Ride buses will operate for UNC-Chapel Hill students. Alcohol checkpoints will be in place at the event, and DWI enforcement will also take place with cooperation from the NC Highway Patrol. The Town will work with downtown bar and restaurant owners to restrict alcohol sales after 1 a.m. Franklin Street will reopen to regular traffic at midnight. All ABC permittees among the bars and restaurants in downtown Chapel Hill will not permit customers to enter or re-enter after 1 a.m.
